Part B

Read the following passage and answer questions

The poor economic performance recorded in many African countries has largely been blamed on bad governance and widespread corruption. Africa governments must act on his bad trend, if they are to make any progress in dealing with economic woes. Surprisingly Africa has been richly endowed with many economic resources

Proper and sound management of these resources will assist Africa economies to scale greater economic heights. If the existing natural resources in a country are trapped and exploited for the good of the people, then poverty eradication can be achieved. However, as long as we are not bold enough to do this, then our people will continue to languish in poverty. The people in leadership positions must sit down and resolve to find lasting solution to the problems that the ordinary Africans are going through

The most effective way of dealing with the said challenges is instilling self discipline in the public service. This is because these are the experts who are responsible for economic planning and implementation. In addition to this, they are expected to educate the citizens on the actual implementation of the plans that government has put in place. These policies are the routs we should take towards economic prosperity. If the African countries fail to do this, then they are doomed.

In spite of the sorry state of affairs in many African countries which have been encroached by poverty, something can be done. This situation in Africa has been worsened by other challenges such as prolonged drought and killer diseases like malaria and aids. African researchers, planners, government and citizens must put great effort to eradicate these challenges. African people must provide homegrown solution to their woes. They must also be ready to pay the price for the full realization of an enjoyable life in our continent.
